

Wildfire plays a prominent role in the Pacific Northwest. As people move near open range or forests, they need to prepare themselves for a wildfire near their homes.

Construct or remodel your home using fire-resistant materials, and consider these helpful tips:

- Create a lean, green, defensible space around your home, at least 30 feet from the house.
- Cut tree limbs and shrubs to keep a ground fire from climbing into trees and into your roof.
- Stack firewood away from your house and wood deck.
- Creating a defensible space will not guarantee your safety, but it will increase your home's chances of survival.
